One of California's leading humanistic psychotherapists, Donald Crowe, PhD, has dedicated more than three decades to helping individuals, families, and groups in need of therapeutic treatment. In private practice since 1977, Dr. Donald Crowe has also served Occupational Health Services as a field clinician since 1981, working closely with police officers and firefighters enduring depression and substance abuse. Committed to aiding underserved populations, he has volunteered his psychotherapy services to people experiencing homelessness in Berkeley, California, for nearly 25 years.

Earlier in his professional development, Dr. Donald Crowe participated in a training group for humanistic and existential psychotherapy in conjunction with James F. T. Bugental, PhD. From 1998 until 2005, he participated in Type A personality treatment training alongside Paul Bracke, PhD.
