Real estate and land use lawyer John E. McElhinney started his career as an Associate Attorney in the real estate and environmental group of Rackemann, Sawyer & Brewster, a leading Boston law firm with more than 100 years of history. Over the subsequent 19 years, Mr. McElhinney served as a partner at another Boston-based legal practice and headed a development company before founding the Law Office of Jack McElhinney, which he currently manages. During his career, John E. McElhinney has handled numerous multimillion-dollar projects for such organizations as Fireman Family Real Estate, Harvard University, and Bain Capital.

The recipient of a Bachelor's degree in Economics and Government from Dartmouth College and a Juris Doctor from Harvard Law School, John E. McElhinney graduated top of his class from both Ivy League institutions. He joined Rackemann, Sawyer & Brewster in 1984; while working at the firm, he frequently led continuing legal education seminars and published related materials.
