Naperville Animal Hospital offers specialized facilities with a full staff of seven licensed veterinarians, for all manner of pet care and grooming. Declawing, spaying, neutering, and dental cleaning are just a few of the regular procedures performed at Naperville Animal Hospital. The hospital is also equipped to handle pet emergencies, with a state-of-the-art surgical suite equipped with anesthesia monitoring equipment, a heated surgical table and a CO2 surgical laser.

Naperville Animal Hospital's primary mission is to provide the kinds of medical examination and diagnostic services that help prevent major diseases from occurring. Pet diagnostics at Naperville Animal Hospital include blood count and chemistry analysis, in-house x-rays and x-ray processing, fecal analysis, urinalysis, ear cytology, skin cytology, blood oxygen monitoring, and blood pressure and heart monitoring.

Naperville Animal Hospital is proactive in screening for heartworm, a common problem in dogs and cats. Untreated, heartworms can inhabit a dog's heart and the large blood vessels around the heart and lungs, damaging tissues and often causing heart and liver failure. Staff at Naperville Animal Hospital prescribe a variety of oral and topical medications, as well as injections, to prevent the occurrence of heartworms, as well as the occurrence of other parasites such as hookworms, roundworms, and whipworms. As these preventative measures are not 100 percent effective, Naperville Animal Hospital counsels monitoring for unusual symptoms such as coughing and breathing difficulties, lethargy, and weight loss. If any of these symptoms becomes evident, Naperville Animal Hospital has equipment necessary to diagnose and treat the parasites, including x-rays and ultrasounds.
